THE END

THE KEY TO THE CAR

At ten o'clock on Friday morning you could always see a large station wagon drive up to the Mortonville National Bank. It would be parked along the street. Six men would get out of the car. Each carried a rifle and a duffle bag. They would enter the bank and their leader, James Allen would walk up to the desk of Mr. Joseph Prager and hand him an envelope.

"You'll find two-hundred dollars inside. Count it. Soon we'll have enough to make that payment on the Roger property. An ideal spot for our gun club."

To be exact, the six members of the On-the-Dot Gun Club, had only visited Mortonville two months ago. But by now they were just part of what can best be called the scenery. After their visit to the bank they would drive down the old Westbury road to the beach. Then they would do some shooting and leave about noon. They were middle aged men and four of them had small close cropped beards. The other two had moustaches.

On this particular Thursday evening the six men were around a table in a small cabin on the outskirts of Mortonville. A large map of the vicinity was spread before them. James Allen was doing the talking.

"Tomorrow morning at ten fifteen the bank vault will be opened by the president. There will be one million dollars in small and large bills inside. Helen will be at her desk. We all take our positions. We put the money into our duffle bags. Then we take Helen with us and tell them that if they dare follow us we will kill her. Any questions?"

Robert Kaley wanted to be certain about one thing so he voiced what was on his mind.

"How about the other get-away car? Where will it be? Our safety depends upon it."

James Allen pointed to a spot upon the map which was marked with what looked like a miniature car.

"The black sedan will be at the end of the Westbury road. Helen will drive it there about six in the morning. Each of us has a set of keys to the car. We drive away south from Mortonville in the station wagon. Then we run it into the bushes and do our quick change. Sam will shave every one of us. We then walk east and land on the Westbury road. I'll be at the wheel of the car. Any more questions."

Barney Golden wouldn't trust his own mother or father. So why should he have any faith in the crooked band of which he was a member.

"When are we going to split up the money? Something might happen to one of us. Suppose some of us are caught. Are you going to split the money when we leave the station wagon."

"Of course," reassured James Allen. "We will split it seven ways. Remember Helen Albert is entitled to her share for helping us plan this job. Now suppose we get a good night's sleep. We must be refreshed for the hard task tomorrow."

Jack Wilson was tired. Being a bank guard wasn't something that kept you alert. Especially in a town that never had a hold-up. And being sixty three years old wasn't exactly an advantage for that kind of work. And the president of the bank, Mr. Willard K. Randalls had sort of hinted that perhaps he should retire.

It was ten o'clock on that Friday morning when the members of the On-the-Dot Gun Club entered the bank. Mr. Joseph Prager was busy so James Allen waited. Barney Golden walked up to the guard.

"Morning, Mr. Wilson. Say, you ought to join us some time and do some shooting. Now don't tell me you wear that gun in the holster just for an ornament. Bet you can do some good shooting."

Jack Wilson laughed. There was one joke he always enjoyed telling.

"There isn't a bullet in the gun. Want to see?"

He took the gun from his holster and swung the barrel out. All the six chambers were empty.

CRIME AND JUSTICE

"Who would hold up this bank? They could never get away from here. Just one road from here to the city and it would be blocked off in no time."

At ten fifteen, the bank president opened the vault. Actually he didn't do it all by himself because a clock mechanism took care of that detail. The great metal door swung to the side. In a moment five deadly rifles were leveled.

"This a stick up," boomed the voice of James Allen. "Don't move, any of you. I know where every alarm button is located. We smashed the outside electrical switch box so your alarms won't work. No use being dead heroes over dead alarms."

Quickly and efficiently the men worked. Two of them helped Jack put the money into one large duffle bag. The rest held their rifles ready for action. There were only three outsiders in the bank. An old lady and two youths. And they were so scared they literally froze in their tracks. James Allen grabbed Helen by the arm. She put on a first class act with tears running down her face.

"We're taking this girl along with us. Try to follow us or do any shooting and she turns into a corpse. Get that into your heads."

They ran outside and piled into the station wagon. They drove south and cut across a small dirt road. Then the car was driven behind some bushes.

"Sam will give us all a quick shave," ordered the leader. "You have two minutes to change your clothing. I'll get out and start dividing the money into separate bundles. Helen will help me."

The female accomplice followed her boy friend. She took from the side of the car a valise. They walked a distance of about sixty yards. Then she opened the valise and James Allen picked up a hand grenade. He pulled the pin and threw it at the car. There was a terrific explosion as the deadly missile hit the station wagon. Human bodies were shattered and the members of the gang were no longer among the living.

"All the money for us two, darling," said the cold blooded killer.

"Now put on the wig and change your dress. I'll shave in a jiffy. Then we put the money into the valise and leave town in the other car."

They moved away from the scene of the explosion and ten minutes later a young couple were walking down the road, the man carrying a valise.

"We will go to Brazil and get married on the boat," said James Allen. "Of course they will have the numbers of the bills we stole. But my contact down there will buy them for fifty cents on the dollar. We'll have a fortune for the rest of our lives. Like millionaires we'll live."

They approached the parked car. Nearby was another car with one man in it. James Allen put his right hand into his pocket.

"Can't find the car key, darling. Must have dropped it some place. Lucky I looked ahead and saw you had an extra key."

Helen used her key and opened the door of the car. The man in the other car jumped out with a gun in his hand. He was none other than the bank guard, Jack Wilson.

"Come out with your hands up, you two. Bet you got all the money in that valise."

James Allen had to think in a hurry. His right hand went for the small gun he was carrying in a shoulder holster. He remembered overhearing the guard tell Barney about no bullets in the chamber.

"Don't go for your gun," warned the bank guard. "I put bullets in my gun."

There seemed only one thing to do and that was to go ahead for the gun. But James Allen never made it. Two slugs ripped into his chest and he collapsed. Helen screamed and her hands threw off her wig in her excitement.

It took three specialists to save the life of James Allen so that he could stand trial for murder in the first degree. Helen whined for mercy.

"I didn't know he was going to kill all of them. I'll turn state's evidence if you give me a break."

The D.A. refused to make a deal and both went to trial. The jury brought in no recommendation for mercy and they were sentenced to die in the electric chair.

Jack Wilson was the hero of the day. The bank gave him enough to retire comfortably.

"How did you catch them?" asked the bank president.

"I saw James Allen drop a key on the floor," explained the hero. "When they left I picked it up. I realized it was a car key. I got some bullets from your desk for my gun and loaded it. Then I went out looking for a strange car to which this key would fit. I tried it on twenty-six cars. The twenty-seventh was their car. So I waited until they came and that's all there was to it."

CRIME AND JUSTICE

How Clever Are You?—

ONE FINE SUMMER MORNING, MR. SOURGRASS AND HIS WIFE SET OUT IN A ROWBOAT TO GO FISHING FOR THE DAY.

TWO DETECTIVES WERE AFTER A MAN ABOUT 27 YEARS OLD, WHO WAS WEARING OVERALLS. THEY CHASED HIM INTO A VACANT HOUSE.

THAT AFTERNOON MR. SOURGRASS CAME ASHORE VERY EXCITED AND REPORTED THAT HIS WIFE HAD FALLEN OVERBOARD AND DROWNED. NEITHER HE NOR HIS WIFE COULD SWIM, AND HE TRIED TO REACH HER WITH HIS HAND, BUT SHE WAS JUST OUT OF HIS ARM REACH. INSPECTOR SCRAB ARRESTED SOURGRASS ON SUSPICION OF MURDER. SCRAB BELIEVED SOURGRASS COULD HAVE RESCUED HIS WIFE IF HE WANTED TO. WHAT LED HIM TO THIS CONCLUSION?

A FEW MINUTES LATER THEY SAW A MUCH OLDER MAN DRESSED IN A SUIT, COME OUT OF THE HOUSE. ONE OF THE DETECTIVES APPROACHED THE STRANGER AND ARRESTED HIM. UPON SEARCHING HIM THEY FOUND A WOMAN'S COMPACT AND AN EYEBROW PENCIL IN HIS POCKET. HOW DID THE DETECTIVE KNOW THAT THE STRANGER WAS THE MAN THEY WANTED?

ANSWER UPSIDE DOWN

ANSWER—SOURGRASS SAID HIS WIFE WAS JUST OUT OF HIS ARM REACH, SO THE INSPECTOR KNEW SOURGRASS COULD HAVE USED HIS FISHING POLE OR A BOAT OAR TO RESCUE HER IF HE WANTED TO. SOURGRASS, LATER CONFESSED HE PUSHED HER OVERBOARD BECAUSE SHE WOULD NOT GIVE HIM A DIVORCE.

ANSWER—THE FUGITIVE HAD ON A SUIT UNDER HIS OVERALLS. WHEN HE ENTERED THE HOUSE HE SLIPPED OFF THE OVERALLS AND APPLIED SOME FACE POWDER AND EYEBROW PENCIL TO HIS FACE TO MAKE HIM APPEAR MUCH OLDER. HOWEVER ONE OF THE DETECTIVES WAS ABLE TO SEE THROUGH HIS DISGUISE.
